P R E F A C E.

THIS little book is put forth with the hope that it will lead to more sight reading in secondary schools. While theoretically all agree that nothing is more helpful and inspiring, practically but few give it the attention it deserves. When sight reading is made to mean loose guessing and inexact interpretation of Latin as a refuge from hard study and scholarly habits, nothing can be urged in its defense ; but properly understood as a method by which one may be safely and surely led to read and understand Latin as Latin, to take in its thoughts easily in the order in which they are presented, with no conscious appeal to English, we must all acknowledge its primary importance.

Poor results in the study of Latin are largely due to misdirected energy. Students learn much about the language, but do not learn the language itself. They get the form, but not the substance. While no language can be learned without knowing its grammar and syntax, the amount of such knowledge that is necessary to one who seeks only the meaning of the text is much smaller than is often supposed; and however valuable close grammatical analysis may be for other purposes, it may, and no doubt often does, seriously impede progress towards rapid reading and intelligent appreciation. The man who parsed Milton's "Paradise Lost" from beginning to end can hardly have felt the poet's inspiration, whatever he may have learned of formal grammar.

Students can never really enter the field of Latin literature nor read it widely and appreciatively who cannot understand it as it is written, without change of order and without formal translation. We translate far too much, we read the original far too little. Students should be taught to read, and to understand as they read, without translation, from the very beginning. The aim from the outset should be to learn to read Latin. This is not so difficult as it seems, and pupils in secondary schools can with proper instruction acquire considerable facility in this direction.

Many of us have felt the lack of just the right kind of reading-matter for beginners to grapple with. The ancients did not write for babes and sucklings, and the Latin offered for translation at sight is mostly meat too strong for young beginners. Latin that is too hard is worse than useless, and leads to nothing but discouragement and self-depreciation. Students must feel that they can conquer and are conquering from day to day. It has seemed to me that for a well-graded series of selections for secondary schools nothing better can be found than Ritchie's Fabulae Faciles, Lhomond's Urbis Romae Viri Illustres, and Gellius' Noctes Atticae. The selections have accordingly been made from these three sources. The Fabulae Faciles may be used to advantage during the latter half of the first year and the first part of the second; the selections from Viri Romae come next in difficulty, and then those from Gellius. It has been my purpose to afford sufficient and suitable material for the entire preparatory course. It is hoped that, far from being an added burden to students already overworked, the use of this book will greatly facilitate the progress through the required work.

From considerable experience with classes in sight reading and from the experience and publications of others, I have compiled and formulated in a few introductory pages some hints and suggestions that I have found most useful, practically, in teaching the art of reading Latin. These are followed by a few models for written lessons, which will be of some use in fixing the foregoing suggestions. In these I have followed, in the main, the method which Prof. W. G. Hale describes in his well-known pamphlet, "The Art of Reading Latin." While Professor Hale's method is admirable in many respects, it is possible for less skillful teachers to overdo the science to the detriment of the art, i.e., to perplex the mind with unnecessary questions as to possible or probable constructions that only delay the successful progress of the interpretation. I do not, therefore, think it well to continue such close analysis by written work, after the fundamental principles of Latin order and syntax have been well mastered.

The text of the selections from Viri Romae is that of Holzer's tenth edition (Stuttgart, 1889); Hertz (Leipsic, 1886) has been followed in those from Gellius. For the material from Fabulae Faciles, I am indebted to Mr. F. Ritchie, of Seven Oaks, England, who kindly placed his excellent little book at my disposal. Barring a few simplifications, and some modifications in orthography and punctuation, the texts have been followed without variation. As authority for quantities the last edition (1895) of Lewis' Elementary Latin Dictionary has been followed, as the most widely adopted, if not in all cases the best standard.

The notes consist in the main of synonyms, antonyms, and Latin paraphrases and definitions. In these the words used are such as are common in Caesar, Cicero, and Vergil, the aim being to increase the student's vocabulary and thereby his ability to read those authors. English translations are given only where no happy and easy Latin equivalent suggested itself.

It is suggested that teachers make frequent use of the selections for oral reading. Our methods of teaching are apt to neglect the ear, a most powerful instrument in the interpretation of thought, and to train the eye only. Often good students will fail to understand the simplest Latin when it is read to them. These selections will be found of about the right difficulty for this important discipline.

Full and grateful acknowledgment is made to all who have added to the value of these pages by their publications in this field. Many helpful suggestions have been drawn from these sources. Special thanks are due to Dr. John Tetlow, head-master of the Boston Girls' High and Latin Schools, for many valuable criticisms; and to Principal A. R. Crittenden, of the Ypsilanti High School, and to Miss Helen B. Muir, assistant in ancient languages in this institution, for assistance in reading the proof.

EASY LATIN FOR SIGHT READING.

INTRODUCTION.

I. What is Sight Reading?

By sight reading is meant the ability to read and understand Latin in the order in which it stands, without formal translation and without slavish dependence upon grammar and dictionary. If a translation be required, it should come as a subsequent exercise in English after the thought of the Latin is already clear. Sight reading does not mean inexact and rapid skimming over of a Latin text. In acquiring the power to read at sight, we proceed at first slowly, afterwards with greater speed, to an exact and accurate comprehension of the language.

II. What are the Difficulties?

The difficulties are not so great as is usually supposed. Constant practice and persistent effort along right methods together with a thorough knowledge of the essentials of Latin grammar are all that is required. The three chief obstacles that hinder the student's progress through a Latin sentence are his deficient vocabulary, his unfamiliarity with the constructions, and the unusual order of the words and clauses.

III. Consideration of the Difficulties:

A. VOCABULARY.

The vocabulary actually necessary for reading ordinary Latin is not discouragingly large. A certain amount is, however, indispensable. To build up a good vocabulary words should be memorized systematically. The following hints may be found helpful:

a. Learn as soon as possible the meanings of the prepositions, conjunctions, pronominal adverbs, and numerals. These recur very frequently and can neither be guessed nor omitted.

b. Learn the force of the principal prefixes and suffixes, and the most important rules for word formation (H. pp. 152-178; A. pp. 140-162). Master all that is essential, omitting exceptions and minor points.

c. Memorize new words as you meet them, beginning with the first or root meaning of words in their simplest forms, e.g., learn dūcō before you try to remember con-dūcō. Knowing the root meaning and the force of prefix or suffix, you will be easily led, without using a dictionary, to the meanings of derivatives and compounds.

d. In inferring the meaning of a prepositional compound, try the root meaning before you try to add the force of the preposition. Many prepositional compounds fail to show the force of the preposition in translation, e.g., adiuvō differs but little from iuvō, and indigeō from egeō. Often the particular force of a compound is made clear by the context.

e. English derivatives, if used in the proper way, may afford valuable aid in inferring meanings. A derivative is, however, always open to suspicion, and should not be trusted in most cases beyond a mere suggestion. In the case of a new verb, the perfect participle will often suggest some English derivative that will give the help desired, e.g., subtractus through English subtract may suggest the proper translation for subtrahō.

f. Have a try at every word before you consult the dictionary; but when you are compelled to do this, look up the word in question so thoroughly that you will not need to do so again. Students waste an incalculable amount of time in looking up the same word a score of times.

B. SYNTAX.

Happily the days are past when students were made to swallow Latin grammar in toto before being allowed to use any of it in practice. The victims of formal culture so called have been many. The new teaching of Latin differs radically from the old in that it seeks to apply grammatical knowledge as fast as it is acquired and that it excludes all non-essentials. In the study of syntax practical utility is the aim of instruction. It should be learned as it is needed. Much that the grammar contains is never needed by students in secondary schools. Many greatly overestimate the amount of syntax that is indispensable to correct and facile interpretation, and in trying to learn too much fail to learn the little well. The essential little must be as well known as the English alphabet.

By practice, great facility can be acquired in recognizing and even anticipating constructions. Many of them are preceded or accompanied by invariable signs that are soon learned, if attention be called to them. Alertness of mind and a little common sense, assisted by the context, often lead one to the correct interpretation without any special thought of the construction. To know the name of a construction is no help in itself to the correct interpretation. The more we read and the more easily we do so, the less we consider constructions as such, though, of course, we of necessity give the proper force to each case and mood in interpreting the thought. Construing is, therefore, not an end in itself, but should be merely the means to the end, namely, the interpretation of the Latin. When overdone and perfunctory, as it often is, it retards rather than assists a pupil's progress in reading Latin. Some special hints on construction are given later on under a separate heading.

C. ORDER OF WORDS.

The difficulty that appears most formidable to beginners is the strangeness of the Latin order. Perfect familiarity with the Roman ways of constructing sentences is, however, an absolute essential to easy reading. The strangeness of the order is often more apparent than real. Examples of the periodic structure and of inverted order are not uncommon in English and are readily understood, e.g., "Whom ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you."

"Up from the meadows rich with corn, Clear in the cool September morn,"
The clustered towers of Frederick stand."

One reason, and perhaps the principal one, why we find sentences such as these so difficult in Latin is that we try to get the Latin thought in fragments by reading and translating bits of the sentence at a time, instead of reading it all straight through and thus getting the complete thought in one effort of the mind as we do in English.

A peculiarity of Latin style that is often conspicuous, and one that is of great assistance in interpretation, is that the thoughts generally move by antitheses. These contrasts are carefully marked by the order of the words and by particles. By noticing these, you can anticipate the course of the thought.

The following brief summary of important points on order and style may be found helpful :

a. To read a language the words must be taken exactly as they come.

b. Read a sentence straight through before you try to translate any of it. As you read, carry along in thought the meanings of the words, whether vague or definite to your mind, and their probable office, so far as the progress of the sentence enables you to do so. Keep the mind expectant until the close of the sentence settles all doubtful points. Try to grasp the meaning of the sentence as a whole. If you do not succeed the first time, read it again and again until you think you get the thought.

c. Latin aims to keep the same subject throughout a complex sentence. When the subject is changed, that fact is usually made plain by inserting it or a pronoun referring to it.

d. The first word in a sentence is always conspicuous in interest and importance. Very often it is a noun, pronoun, or phrase referring to the preceding sentence or to some part of it :

Id cum frūstrā saepe fēcisset, etc. Here id refers to what has been described in the foregoing sentence.

e. The most important word or combination of words is often taken out from a subordinate introductory sentence and placed at the very beginning before the connective introducing that sentence. This order is especially common with cum clauses of time and cause. The word or phrase thus made emphatic is often such as has been described in d above :

Latīnus dum ad Tiberim dēscendit, sacerdōs bovem immolāvit.

In quem postquam omnium ōra conversa sunt, ad ūnum omnēs Scipiōnem in Hispāniā prōcōnsulem esse iussērunt.

Quae rēs cum iuvenī Pompēiō cēnantī nūntiāta esset, etc.

f. When a word serves as the common subject or object of both a principal and subordinate clause, it stands before them both. The same is true, if the same word is subject of the principal clause and object (direct or indirect) of the subordinate clause. Likewise if the subject of the subordinate clause is the object (direct or indirect) of the principal clause. (Cf. Menge's Repetitorium, 543.)

Ancus, priusquam eis bellum indiceret, lēgātum misit, Ancus, before he declared war against them, sent an ambassador.

Masinissam qui ēgregiē rem Rōmānam adiūverat aureā corōnā dōnāvit, Masinissa, who had conspicuously assisted the Roman expedition, he gave a golden crown.

g. Latin makes use of many words, commonly pronouns and pronominal adverbs, to point forward to a following explanatory sentence. We are thus led to anticipate and prepare ourselves for what is to come. Watch for these signs and make the most of them. They are very helpful.

Forte ita incidit ut eō ipsō tempore Hasdrubal ad eundem portum appelleret, perchance it so happened that at that very time Hasdrubal landed at the same harbor.

Tam longē aberam ut eum nōn vidērem, I was so far away that I did not see him.

Here ita and tam point forward to the following ut clauses.

h. A modifying clause or phrase is usually put before the thing modified, hence a clause of characteristic sometimes precedes the thing characterized :

Unde agger comportāri posset, nihil erat reliquum, there was nothing left from which a mound could be constructed.

i. Words strongly contrasted are often put next to each other. When the subject and object are thus placed, it is sometimes difficult to distinguish them until we come to the verb. With a verb taking two accusatives, the subject often stands between them :

Mē Albānī ducem creāvērunt, the Albans elected me general.

j. Quidem always marks an antithesis, expressed or understood. Do not always translate it by indeed, which often means nothing at all. It is often untranslatable, though its influence is always felt :

Bellum quidem nūllum gessit, sed nōn minus cīvitatī prōfuit quam Rōmulus, he waged no war, to be sure, but he was of no less service to the state than Romulus.

k. The antecedent of a relative pronoun often follows it, and often it is not expressed at all :

Cum in insidiās vēnissent quī locus Furculae Caudinae vocābātur, etc., when they had come to the ambush, a place which was called the Caudine Forks.

Pompēius enim, quod antea contigerat nēmini, primum ex Āfricā, iterum ex Eurōpā, tertiō ex Asiā triumphāvit, for Pompey triumphed first over Africa, second over Europe, and third over Asia, (a thing) which had happened to no one before.

Misit (sc. eōs) quī sibi cōsulātum dēposcerent, he sent (men) to demand the consulship for himself.

l. Adjectives that precede nouns are emphatic, unless they are numeral adjectives or adjectives expressing quantity.

m. An adverb modifies a verb, adjective, or other adverb, and regularly precedes the word it modifies.

n. Cum often stands between an adjective and noun.

IV. Notes on Individual Words and Constructions.

1. Latin expresses loosely by means of participles all sorts of relations that are expressed in English by subordinate clauses. The particular relation must be determined by the context.

2. Expect to find many more cases of apposition than in English. An appositive often takes the place of :

a. A temporal clause.

Cicerō puer Arpinī vīxit, Cicero, when he was a boy, lived at Arpinum.

b. A concessive clause.

Labiēnō lēgātō milītēs nōn pārent, the soldiers do not obey Labienus, although he is lieutenant.

c. A relative clause.

Externus timor, māximum concordiae vinculum, etc., fear without, which is the strongest bond of union.

3. Clauses capable of being used as the subject or the object of a verb are :

I. Infinitive Clauses, or Indicative Clauses with quod in statements of fact.

II. Indirect Questions.

III. Purpose Clauses.

IV. Result Clauses.

4. Cum is either a preposition or a conjunction. The following word will usually determine its character. If that be a noun in the ablative case, cum is a preposition.

Sometimes, however, a modifying genitive stands between cum and its object. If cum be a conjunction, it may be a mere connective, correlative with a following tum, or it may introduce a subordinate clause and mean since, although, or when. If it introduces a subordinate clause and means since or although, it is followed by the subjunctive. If it means when, the following mood will be indicative, in case the tense be present or future; if the tense be past, the mood will probably be subjunctive.

5. Dum, dōnec, and quoad, in the sense of while or as long as, take the indicative mood. In the sense of until, when expressing purpose, doubt, or futurity, they take the subjunctive.

6. Antequam and priusquam, when referring to an anticipated or intended act which may or may not occur, take the subjunctive. When they refer to the actual occurrence of an event as a point beyond or back of which the main event took place, they take the indicative :

Priusquam dīmīcārent, militēs hortātus est, he harangued the soldiers before they fought.

Haec nōn intellēxit antequam Genāvam pervēnit, he did not perceive this before he arrived at Geneva.

7. Quīn has the following principal uses :

Quīn.	{	I. Principal clauses, with the indicative.	{	a. Interrogative, why not?
				b. Corroborative, indeed, nay, verily , etc.
{	II. Subordinate clauses, with the subjunctive.	{	Used after negative sentences to express result.

8. Ut has the following principal uses :

Ut.	I. As conjunctive adverb, with the indicative.	1. Time, when, as soon as.
		2. Manner. { a. Interrogative, how? in what way? b. Relative, as, for example, just as, since, considering.
	II. As conjunction, with the subjunctive.	{ a. Concessive, although. b. Purpose, that, in order that, in order that not (after verbs of fearing). c. Result, so that, that.

As a relative adverb ut is often followed by a noun in apposition, or by an adjective.

9. Et has three uses: (1) as connecting two words or expressions, and; (2) as the first of two et's, both . . . and; (3) as bearing upon a single word, also, too, even.

10. Adeō in its commonest use means to such a degree, and is followed by an ut clause of result.

11. Dubitō, in the sense of doubt, and dubium preceded by a negative, are usually followed by quā and the subjunctive. In the sense of hesitate dubitō is regularly followed by the infinitive.

12. A pluperfect subjunctive is equal to a future perfect indicative from a past point of view.

13. Keep in mind:

a. That the gerund is a verbal noun, and may therefore stand either alone or with an object.

b. That the gerundive is a participle used adjectively, agreeing with a substantive in gender, number, and case.

c. That the gerundive with its substantive may be used for any gerund with a substantive.

d. That the gerund with a direct object is commonly used only in the genitive and in the ablative without a preposition. In other cases the gerundive is preferred.

14. Distinguish between plūs, amplius, potius, and magis.

plūs refers to quantity.

amplius refers to extent of time or space.

potius expresses preference, and excludes the second of two things compared.

magis expresses degree.

15. Predicate adjectives may be followed by the dative, by the objective genitive, or by the ablative of specification to complete their meaning:

Hōc hostī optimum erat, this was best for the enemy.

Avidus laudis erat, he was eager for praise.

Claudus alterō pede est, he is lame in one foot.

16. THE CASES.

1. The Nominative.

An introductory noun in the nominative case is the subject of a verb either main or subordinate.

2. The Genitive.

a. In general the genitive of a noun may be possessive, subjective, objective, partitive, or in apposition with some other genitive. If modified by an adjective, it may be descriptive genitive.

b. The genitive of a pronoun will be either subjective, objective, partitive, or belong to some noun as an adjective.

c. The genitive of an adjective expressing size or quantity may agree with a noun or may express the value of something.

d. The Latin genitive is used to express that to which the action of a noun or an adjective is done (objective), as well as that from which it springs (subjective).

e. Nouns expressing activity of the mind or heart are usually followed by :

(1) The objective genitive of a noun.

(2) The objective genitive of a gerund or of a gerundive agreeing with a noun.

3. The Dative.

a. The dative of any word may designate the person or thing indirectly concerned in an act or state expressed by a noun, adjective, verb, or a group of words.

b. The dative of the name of a person, or of a word referring to a person, may have the general sense of the dative case, or may designate the apparent agent or the possessor.

c. Words denoting persons deprived of a thing are often put in the dative, the Latin regarding the act as done to the persons.

d. If a form that may be either dative or ablative be the name of a person or refer to a person, it is more likely to be a dative than an ablative, since personal relations are denoted more frequently by the former than by the latter.

4. The Accusative.

a. The name of a town or domus or rūs, in the accusative without a preposition, probably designates the object to which motion is directed.

b. The name of a person, or a word referring to persons, in the accusative case without a preposition, must be either the object of a verb, the subject or predicate of an infinitive, or in apposition with one of these.

c. As accusatives of specification are found most commonly: the relative quod; the interrogative quid; hōc and id with aetātis or temporis; partem, vicem, and genus with omne or a pronoun.

d. Accusatives of time and space are naturally limited to such nouns as can convey such ideas, e.g., pedēs, mēnsēs, etc.

e. Cognate accusatives are possible only for nouns that repeat in substantive form the meaning of a verb, e.g., vīta, somnium, etc.; and for neuter pronouns and adjectives.

5. The Ablative.

a. The ablative case includes three ideas from which all its constructions flow, viz.: the starting point (the true ablative, from), the means (the instrumental, by), and the place (the locative, in).

b. Nearly all ablatives can be absolute, or can depend on a comparative or on a special word like dignus or ūtor. The meaning of the word is a great help in suggesting the correct construction.

c. The ablative without a preposition, referring to a person, must be ablative absolute, ablative dependent on a comparative or some special word like dignus or ûtor or ablative of source with some word like genitus, ortus, or nātus.

d. The ablative of a word referring to time naturally expresses the time when.

MODELS FOR WRITTEN LESSONS.

TO THE TEACHER.

The following exercises are intended to fix more firmly in mind the preceding principles of order and syntax. They should be used at convenient intervals and without previous announcement or preparation. The passage for translation should be written on the board, and each question should be answered as it occurs before the pupil goes farther. Do not write more of the sentence than precedes the respective questions until they are answered. Teachers may find it profitable to prepare additional exercises on the models here presented.

I.

Virginēs Sabīnōrum rapiuntur.

Multi¹ convēnere² studiō³ videndae⁴ novae urbis, m̄xime Sabīnī cum⁵ liberis et⁶ coniugibus. Ubi spectāculi tempus vēnit eōque⁷ conversae mentēs cum oculis erant, tum signū⁸ datō⁹ iuvenēs Rōmānī discurrunt¹⁰, virginēs rapiunt¹¹.

1. What may be said of the first word in a sentence?
2. What tense? Give the other form.
3. What are the possible cases and constructions? What constructions may follow studiō? (See IV, 16, 2, e.)
4. Is this a gerund or a gerundive?
5. What are the possible uses and meanings of cum?
6. What are the uses of et?
7. eōque = et in eum locum.
8. Possible cases and constructions?
9. Construction? What relations may be expressed by participles?
10. What is the force of the prefix dis-?
11. Translate.

1. What is the probable construction of this phrase?
2. What constructions follow ā or ab?
3. commūtō, cf. English commute = exchange.
4. Probable construction?
5. What kind of a clause may now be expected?
6. eō = in eum locum.
7. What is the force of this tense? (See IV, 12.)

8. What are the possible constructions? (See IV, 16, 4, b.)
9. propinquī = cōgnātī, sanguine coniūctī.
10. fallere = violāre.

PERSEUS AND THE HEAD OF MEDUSA.

FABULAE FACILES.

I.

PERSEUS.

Acrisius, an ancient king of Argos, had been warned by an oracle that he would perish by the hand of his grandson. On discovering, therefore, that his daughter Danae had given birth to a son, Acrisius endeavored to escape his fate by casting both mother and child adrift on the sea. They were saved, however, by the help of Jupiter; and Perseus, the child, grew up at the court of Polydectes, king of Seriphos, an island in the Aegean Sea. On reaching manhood, Perseus was sent by Polydectes to fetch the head of Medusa, one of the Gorgons. This dangerous task he accomplished with the help of Apollo and Minerva, and on his way home he rescued Andromeda (daughter of Cepheus) from a sea monster. Perseus then married Andromeda, and lived some time in the country of Cepheus. At length, however, he returned to Seriphos, and turned Polydectes to stone by showing him the Gorgon's head; he then went to the court of Acrisius, who fled in terror at the news of his grandson's return. The oracle was duly fulfilled, for Acrisius was accidentally killed by a quoit thrown by Perseus.

HERCULES.

Hercules, a Greek hero celebrated for his great strength, was pursued throughout his life by the hatred of Juno. While yet an infant, he strangled some serpents sent by the goddess to destroy him. During his boyhood and youth he performed various marvelous feats of strength; and, on reaching manhood, succeeded in delivering the Thebans from the oppression of the Minyae. In a fit of madness, sent upon him by Juno, he slew his own children, and, on consulting the Delphic oracle as to how he should cleanse himself from this crime, he was ordered to submit himself for twelve years to Eurystheus, king of Tiryns, and to perform whatever tasks were appointed him. Hercules obeyed the oracle, and during the twelve years of his servitude accomplished twelve extraordinary feats known as the Labors of Hercules. His death was caused, unintentionally, by his wife Deianira. Hercules had shot with his poisoned arrows a Centaur named Nessus, who had insulted Deianira. Nessus, before he died, gave some of his blood to Deianira, and told her it would act as a charm to secure her husband's love. Some time after, Deianira, wishing to try the charm, soaked one of her husband's garments in the blood, not knowing that it was poisoned. Hercules put on the robe, and, after suffering terrible torments, died, or was carried off by his father Jupiter.

PUBLIUS CORNELIUS SCIPIO AFRICANUS.

218-183 B.C.

This Scipio, known as Africanus Major to distinguish him from Africanus Minor, the hero of the Third Punic War, was of a noble line of ancestors. He first distinguished himself in 218 B.C., when but sixteen years of age, by saving his father's life in battle. It was his supreme glory to conquer Hannibal and bring the Second Punic War to a successful conclusion.

MARCUS PORCIUS CATO.

234-149 B.C.

Cato is one of the best-known and most striking figures of Roman history, being famous as a soldier, as a civil magistrate, and as a writer. In every respect he was a typical Roman of the old days. As a soldier he won renown in the Second Punic War. His hostility to Carthage was unrelenting and has become proverbial. He distinguished himself in civil affairs, especially by his censorship. He stood for all that was simple, frugal, and virtuous against the growing luxury and corruption of the time, and administered his office so rigorously that the name of Censor has clung to him to this day. Cato wrote on history and agriculture, and is among the earliest writers of Latin prose.

IV.

LUCIUS AEMILIUS PAULUS MACEDONICUS.

168 B.C.

Aemilius Paulus was one of the best specimens of the Roman nobility. He would condescend to no mean action to win personal advantage. He was a model soldier and an astute lawyer, and throughout his life won the admiration of all classes by the purity and integrity of his character. He was born about 230 B.C.; died 160 B.C. His greatest achievement, which gave him his cognomen, was his victory over Perseus, King of Macedonia, in his second consulship (168 B.C.). His triumph was the most splendid that Rome had yet seen.

SELECTIONS FROM AULUS GELLIUS.

I. LIFE OF AULUS GELLIUS.

All the information that we have about Gellius is contained in his well-known work, Noctes Atticae. In this he now and then makes incidental reference to himself and his activities, but nowhere gives any express or detailed account of his life. The date of his birth and of his death are equally uncertain, but we know from his references to his contemporaries that he must have lived from about 120 to 180 A.D. He was probably a Roman and of good family, and his education in grammar, rhetoric, and philosophy was of the very best. Among his teachers may be mentioned Sulpicius Apollinaris, the grammarian, a famous Carthaginian, who inspired him with a lasting interest in his art; Titus Castricius, the foremost rhetorician of his time; and Favorinus, the philosopher, once the favorite of the Emperor Hadrian, and distinguished for his learning and eloquence. Gellius was a lawyer by profession, but found time for much reading and study. Probably at the suggestion of Favorinus, he made a journey to Greece and traveled extensively in that country, remaining for a considerable time at Athens. It was there, in a country house near the city, during the long nights of winter, that he prepared his book. This suggested its title Noctes Atticae. No subsequent events of his life are known to us.

II. NOCTES ATTICAE.

Gellius tells us in his preface that it was his habit when reading to make notes and extracts from the volume before him, and that these make up his book. It is, therefore, a note-book, containing the concentrated results of years of study. Of the twenty books of his work, all have come down to us excepting the eighth. There is no attempt made to classify the contents, but it is a miscellaneous collection of quotations, discussions, and dissertations on a great variety of subjects, mainly grammar, philosophy, history, and biography.

Noctes Atticae has a fourfold value :

a. As a story book. Gellius says that one object of his book was to entertain his children. It is therefore written in a popular vein, and contains but little that is abstruse or technical.

b. As a source of information. Gellius gives much interesting information on a great variety of subjects which, but for him, would never have been so clearly understood.

c. As giving quotations from authors no longer extant. It is in this respect that Noctes Atticae is peculiarly valuable.

d. As a biographer of prominent writers. In this field Gellius has done much, e.g., nearly all we know about Plautus is from this source.

The style of Noctes Atticae is good in general, but it is marred by an affectation towards out-of-the-way and obsolete words and phrases. Gellius here is simply following the literary fashion of his day. It is this same love of the archaic that causes him to ignore the Roman writers that lived nearest to his own time. He scarcely mentions the writers of the Augustan age, but speaks in the highest terms of Plautus, Ennius, Cato, and other early writers, and quotes from them constantly.

testimōnium esse iūstum potuisset, nisi ab ipsō dictum esset :

15 Immortālēs mortālēs sī foret fās flēre, Flērent dīvae Camēnae⁷ Naevium poētā.

1. Cn. Naevius, 270–204 B.C., a famous epic and dramatic poet.
Of his epic poem on the First Punic War a few fragments still remain. It was extensively copied by later writers, especially by Vergil. His plays were very popular even in the Augustan age.

2. T. Maccius Plautus, born about 254 B.C., was the most celebrated comic poet of Rome.
We still possess twenty of his plays.

3. M. Pacuvius, one of the early Roman tragedians, was born about 220 B.C. He was equally famous as a painter and as a writer. A few fragments of his plays are extant.

135. Quod pūgna¹ bellī cīvilis victōriaque Gāi Caesaris quam vīcit in Pharsālīis campīs, nūntiāta praedictaque 5 est per cūiuspiam sacerdotis vāticinium eōdem ipsō diē in Ītaliā Patavī².

Quō C. Caesar et Cn. Pompēius diē per civile bellum signis conlātis in Thessaliā cōnflīxērunt, rēs accidit Patavī in Trānspadāna Ītaliā memorārī digna. Cornē- 10 lius quīdam sacerdos, et nōbilis et sacerdoti religiōnibus venerandus et castitāte vitae sāctus, repente ³mōtā mente, cōnspicere sē procul dixit pūgnam ācerrimam pūgnārī, āc deīnde aliōs cēdere aliōs urgēre, caedem, fugam, tēla volantia, instaurātiōnem pūgnae, impressiōnem, gemitūs, 15 volnera, proinde ut sī ipse in proeliō versārētur, cōram vidēre sēsē vōciferātus est āc postea subitō exclāmāvit Caesarem vīcisse.

Ea Cornēli sacerdotis hariolātiō levis tum quidem visa est et vēcors. Māgnae mox admirātiōni fuit quoniam 20 nōn modo pūgnae diēs quae in Thessaliā pūgnāta est, neque proeli exitus quī erat praedictus, idem fuit, sed omnēs quoque pūgnandī vicissitūdīnēs et ipsa exercituum

1. This refers to the battle of Pharsalia in Thessaly, 48 B.C., in which Caesar defeated Pompey and became master of the world.

2. Patavium, now Padua, was, under the Romans, the most important city in northern Italy.

3. The ancients believed that the minds of men could be moved or inspired by the gods to prophesy. This was called vāticinium or hariolātiō.

duōrum cōfliktātiō vāticinantis mōtū atque verbis re-praesentāta est.

136. Mithradātem¹, Pontī rēgem, duārum et vīgintī gentium linguīs locūtum; Quīntumque Ennium² tria corda habēre
5 sēsē dīxisse quod trīs linguās scīret, Graecam, Oscam, Latinam.

Quīntus Ennius tria corda habēre sēsē dicēbat quod loqui Graecē et Oscē et Latīnē scīret. Mithradātēs autem, ³Pontī atque Bithŷniae rēx inclutus, quī ā Cn.
10 Pompēiō bellō superātus est, duārum et vīgintī gentium quās sub diciōne habuit, linguīs locūtus est eārumque omnium gentium cum virīs haud umquam per interpretem conlocūtus est, sed ut quemque ab eō appellārī ūsus fuit, proinde linguā et ōrātiōne ipsius nōn minus scītē quam 15 sī gentilis ēius esset, locūtus est.

1. Mithradates, surnamed the Great, made three wars against the Romans. He was finally subdued by Pompey, 65 B.C. Cicero calls him the greatest of all kings after Alexander.

2. Ennius, 239-169 B.C., was regarded by the Romans as the father of their poetry. His most important work was an epic poem called the Annals, being a history of Rome. All his works are lost excepting a few fragments.

3. Pontus and Bithynia are provinces in Asia Minor.

XIX, 3.

137. Quod turpius est frīgidē laudārī quam acerbius vituperārī.

Turpius esse dicēbat Favōrinus¹ philosophus exiguē atque frīgidē laudārī quam insectanter et graviter vitupe-

138. Quam diversae Graecōrum sententiae super numerō Niobae¹ filiōrum.

Mira et prope adeō ridicula diversitās fābulae apud Graecōs poētās dēprēnditur super numerō Niobae filiō- 10 rum. Nam Homērus² puerōs puellāsque ēius bis sēnōs dicit fuisse, Euripidēs³ bis septēnōs, Sapphō⁴ bis novēnōs, Bacchylidēs⁵ et Pindarus⁶ bis dēnōs, quidam aliī scriptōrēs trēs fuisse sōlōs dixērunt.

1. Niobe, the wife of Amphion, the king of Thebes, being proud of the number of her children, deemed herself superior to Latona, who had but two, Apollo and Diana. As a punishment her children were all killed by the shafts of the archer god and his sister.

2. Homer, the great epic poet of Greece, may have lived about 900 B.C.

3. Euripides followed Sophocles as the foremost writer of Greek tragedy, 480-406 B.C.

4. Sappho, the greatest of ancient poetesses, lived in the seventh century B.C. and wrote lyrics.

5. Bacchylides, one of the great lyric poets of Greece, flourished about 470 B.C.

6. Pindar, the greatest lyric poet of Greece, was born about 522 B.C.
